Tai Chi 6-week class sessions at Metfield Clubhouse

Join Master of Acupuncture and Oriental Medicine, Erik Hardin, L.Ac. to learn a gentle form of Martial Arts. The Yang form of Tai Chi is typically done with slow, steady movements, which help practitioners relax and to feel the flow of energy within their bodies. The movements are large enough to foster a sense of exuberance and freedom. Hardin is a certified teacher of qigong/ tai chi, having studied the art form for over 15 years.

These Tai Chi sessions are an 6-class series commitment, with no drop-in options and a maximum of 32 students per session brought to you by Ozark Integrative Medicine and Bella Vista POA Recreation Department.

Call Metfield Clubhouse to inquire when the next 6-class series of Tai Chi has been scheduled: (479) 855-8165 and add your name to the class roster, if interested.

TRX.Training System—TRX = “total body resistance exercise.” As opposed to gym machines that target very specific muscles, most TRX exercises work multiple muscles at once, especially the core. There is a simple concept: use your own bodyweight and gravity as resistance to build-up strength. Positioning your body on the cables and ties affects the muscle groups you target, and the intensity of the workout. A poster demonstrating various positioning is on display in the fitness center to assist new users. It is generally advisable to start off with the guidance of a professional trainer.
